

Censoring Biden Critics: Tech's War on Real News

• If you weren't sure that Big Tech companies like Twitter and Facebook are biased against conservatives, their actions in shutting down The Post's story about Joe and Hunter Biden is proof enough ("Censored," Oct. 15).

I'm calling on all conservatives to get off those social-media outlets immediately and sell any stock you may have in these companies. The only way to fight back is to hit them where it will hurt the most — their pocketbooks.

If this was a story about President Trump and his family, they would never take it down or the Democrats would be screaming about free speech.

• I want to thank you for your continued effort to disseminate the facts regarding Hunter Biden.

The article highlighted my concerns not only regarding corruption of our government officials, but also about media outlets such as Twitter and Facebook.

I'm extremely alarmed about the suppression and censorship of free speech. Our free speech as Americans is being controlled, if not dominated, by these companies. Keep up the great work.

• So much of the so-called mainstream media has become nothing but a propaganda outlet for the Democratic Party and, in particular, a cover for Joe Biden and his campaign.

Your newspaper, the publisher, the reporters and editors are to be complimented on exposing the corrupt activities of the Bidens, which has been long overdue.

THE ISSUE: Twitter and Facebook's suppression of The Post's reporting on Hunter Biden's personal e-mails.

Your courage in fearlessly reporting the facts and news that the American people have a right to know restores some of the faith in the power of the press as a figurative "fourth branch of government," providing added checks and balances, which has served this country well in the past, before the giant unregulated tech conglomerates like Facebook, Twitter and others began the monopolistic manipulation and control of the news.

• Facebook and Twitter's suppression of The Post's report on Hunter Biden's e-mails exemplifies the outright, blatant and ongoing assault on speech.

The quality of a country's freedom of expression, speech and the press weighs heavily in whether a true democracy decays into dictatorship. Kudos to The Post.

• Whatever conclusion one can draw from the Hunter Biden material, they pale in comparison to the all-too-numerous scandals and underhanded dealings generated by our 45th president.

So thank you for the distraction — but no, this does not change my mind one iota that we desperately need to replace Trump, who daily becomes more and more of a dangerous embarrassment to our beloved nation.

• The censorship of stories related to the Hunter Biden scandal by Facebook and Twitter is nauseating but predictable.

These type of suppression tactics are consistently utilized to silence right-wing commentary.

This detestable censoring was compounded by Twitter locking White House Press Secretary Kayleigh McEnany's account after she posted a link to the story.

These Big Tech companies are obviously benevolent to the ideologies of the left. Americans should be perturbed by the implications of these Big Tech improprieties.

• Enough is enough when it comes to Big Tech social-media companies censoring free speech.

Several laws need to be invoked to stop these companies from pushing a partisan Democrat agenda.

Americans cannot tolerate this socialist censoring of the people's free speech. Once Trump gets re-elected, he should make it right with executive orders.

These companies are exposed, and hitting them in the wallet is the answer until they cease their partisan censorship.
